Says Most Basic, Crucial Problem Of Minority Groups Is Job Discrimination

Irving Ferman, executive vice chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts, said in New York that the "most basic and crucial problem" confronting minority groups was discrimination in employment. He urged volunteer agencies in the field of civil rights to put "greater emphasis" on the "bread-and-butter" problem of equal opportunity for employment.

His talk was one of a series on the problems of minority groups at the annual meeting of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith in the Savoy Hilton Hotel, says the New York Times. He said his committee, headed by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, had found "a remarkable degree of acceptance and readiness" by business and industrial executives to integrate minority group members in their work forces.

Joseph Cohen, chairman of the League's community-service committee, said that Negroes had started to "act like the white majority as they near genuine equality," and this situation would call for "new accommodations" by all Americans.

Rabbi Albert I. Gordon, leader of Temple Emanuel, Newton, Mass., said that Jews were not settling in the suburbs to "escape civil rights issues" and their non-white city neighbors. Rabbi Gordon, who wrote the sociological study, "Jews In Suburbia," declared that "far more important" changing social and economic factors accounted for the move to the suburbs by both Jews and Christians.

Not the least of these, he said, "are the factors associated with the increasing numbers of marriages, larger families, changing housing needs, improved economic income, better transportation and the desire for improved status."

Barney Balaban, honorary vice chairman of the League, urged the agency "to build for greater leadership as a human rights organization in the years ahead."

The Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith criticised what it termed "a clear pattern of discrimination against Jews" by life insurance companies in restricting the employment of Jews in executive posts in the home offices, says the York Times. The League reported "some perceptible decrease" in bias against Jews, but said this improvement was reflected primarily in their employment in the sales branches of the insurance companies.

The report, based on a study of seven major life insurance companies, which were not identified, was presented at the League's annual meeting at the Savoy Hilton Hotel. It was made by Judge David A. Rose, of Boston, chairman of its civil rights committee. The League is devoted to combating bigotry and discrimination and to furthering human rights.

Rickover Urges Greater Emphasis On Education To Match Soviet

Vice Admiral Hyman G. Rickover said that his recent visit to the Soviet Union and Poland had convinced him that "our really great race with the Soviet Union is in education."

"The nation that wins this race will be the potentially dominant power," he asserted in an interview with the New York Times. "Unless we in the United States can solve our educational problems, we will have difficulty in solving other problems."

Admiral Rickover, who is known as the father of the atomic submarine, was a member of the group that accompanied Vice President Richard M. Nixon on his recent thirteen-day visit to the Soviet Union and Poland.

Admiral Rickover reported that he had been greatly impressed by what he had seen and heard about Russian and Polish education. "They are currently graduating more qualified scientists and engineers from their universities than we are," he said.

When Soviet students, who take the university-preparatory program, are graduated from high school at the age of 17 or 18, the admiral said, "they know as much as our students do at the end of two years of college." All this, he went on, served to confirm his previous beliefs that there must be a vast upgrading of American education, with increased emphasis given to the basic arts and sciences.

The Navy nuclear scientist's frequent criticism of "soft" American school and college programs and his calls for a more rigorous system patterned after those in Europe have made him a controversial figure in education.

Admiral Rickover, who has often spoken out about what he considered "frills" in education, said: "I searched far and wide in Russia and Poland and could not find a single drum majorette. Nor did I hear of a single school where the principal was an ex-athletic coach."

Observing that both the Soviet Union and Poland were committed to school programs which made demands on the students, the admiral said that both educators and parents there regarded "teenhood as a period of preparation for adulthood and not as a period for just having a good time." In 1957, 1,600,000 secondary school graduates in Russia passed an examination, he asserted, "which only about two per cent of American high school graduates would have been able to pass."

American high schools graduated 1,639,000 students in 1959. Education in the Soviet Union and Poland is provided free of cost to students, he noted. "No student there is denied an education because of a lack of financial ability," the admiral said. "At the University of Moscow and elsewhere students receive living expenses as well as free tuition. The amounts given to students increase the longer they stay and the better they do in their studies."

Admiral Rickover said that he had been particularly impressed by the strong emphasis being placed on education in Poland. "Here is a country that was devastated in war, which had 7,000,000 people — 25 per cent of its population — killed," he said. "When the Germans marched in 1939, they rounded up the leaders and the intellectual elite and sent them to concentration camps where many died.

"Yet, today," the admiral continued, "this country has its children going to school six hours a day, six days a week, ten months a year." Polish students, he said, work hard in school and have no free time or so-called study periods during the school day. "They do not spend their time," he added, "collecting milk bottles or old newspapers or taking courses in 'How to Find a Mate.'"

"Those who complete the eleven-year course and are going on to the university," Admiral Rickover commented, "study one foreign language continuously for six years and another foreign language for four years. They also have had several years of physics, chemistry and mathematics."

Admiral Rickover asserted that "our educationists keep lulling the American people with the threadbare statement that 'our schools are the best in the world.' "They (the educationists) will not face facts, they will not answer questions," he said. "They simply malign those who take issue with them."

Admiral Rickover remarked that he was not advocating that "we copy the Soviet political system." "But it seems to me," he declared, "that we in the United States who are so blessed with natural resources and have such a high standard of living certainly should be able to give the same emphasis to education that they do."

Vice-Adm. Hyman G. Rickover lashed out at "educationists" who have "denuded the high school curriculum of its former solid content and filled it with frills and know-how courses." This "educational officialdom," he said, has infested the schools with "pedagogic errors and monstrosities" while the Russians have forged ahead with "more efficient education."

The Admiral spoke at a dinner for 200 persons at the metropolitan Club, in New York, under the auspices of the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation, Inc., which conducted a two-day institute on "Reconstructing Scientific Education for All", says the New York Herald Tribune. Adm. Rickover declared, "Neither I nor other critics have ever recommended that we take over the Russian educational system; we do urge that we consider Russian educational achievements as a minimum standard for our own educational objectives."

He reiterated his charge that he cannot find enough young men to help him "carry on my assigned task in nuclear propulsion." For those who are accepted in the program, he said, "we then have to take time out to set up courses teaching these very bright young people fundamentals they should have learned at school and college. Obviously, this holds up our work."

Adm. Rickover hit back at those who have criticized him for attacking American education. He declared that no groups "order or pay me to talk about education," and that if fees are offered, they go to specified charities along with royalties from his book, "Education And Freedom."

In discussing "the mediocrity of our schools," reports the New York Herald Tribune, the Admiral said: "How can we expect children to choose higher mathematics when their classmates are having fun learning to play canasta, cook, or find a mate? Why should an eighth grader tackle a hard subject when next door the kids are happily whizzing through a course

Famed Lawyer Of Farm Co-Ops, Expert On Labour, Sued Late Henry Ford For $1 Million Over Libel Of Jews

Aaron L. Sapiro, internationally known lawyer in the field of labor, farm cooperatives and women's compensation, died in his apartment in Los Angeles, Cal. He was 75 years old. Mr. Sapiro, who in 1927 sued the late Henry Ford for $1,000,000, charging him with libeling the Jewish religion, was considered the chief legal authority in the U.S. on matters involving cooperative marketing.

He was generally regarded as an authority on group law for trade associations, labor unions and farmers' organizations, says the New York Times. He wrote the cooperative law in effect in forty states and was the co-writer of the original, Industrial Accident Laws for California, the State Market Commission Act, and the Fish Marketing Act.

Mr. Sapiro leaves two sons, Stanley and Leland, and a sister, Mrs. David E. Jacobs.

Mr. Sapiro's fame as an organizer of farm cooperatives led to the suit against Mr. Ford that was to make him known around the world. He accused the automobile manufacturer of having damaged his reputation by charging that a Jewish conspiracy was seeking to win control of American agriculture.

The charges were contained in Mr. Ford's weekly newspaper, The Dearborn Independent, which had carried a series of articles that had been widely criticized as anti-Semitic. On the witness stand, Mr. Ford disclaimed animosity toward the Jews. It was brought out that he did not write a column that appeared under his name nor did he read the publication.

Mr. Ford settled the suit without disclosing the terms. He ceased publishing the paper and then issued a public apology in which he explained that he had discovered that the articles in The Dearborn Independent were doing harm by creating prejudice.

During the trial, Mr. Sapiro acknowledged that he had received large fees as a lawyer for farming and fruit-growing cooperatives — the sum of $1,000,000 was mentioned by Mr. Ford's lawyer — but Mr. Sapiro declared that the fees covered a twelve-year period and also had gone to others.

In a press conference in Detroit, where the trial was held, says the New York Times, Mr. Sapiro said his cooperative plan had "earned millions upon millions for the farmers, and if I had not been attacked by Henry Ford's weekly and suspicion cast upon my integrity, I could have extended this plan and brought even greater benefit to the farmers of the United States."

After the trial, it was generally reported that the total costs paid by Mr. Ford in settling the case with Mr. Sapiro were $140,000. Less than a year later, in a speech before the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Sapiro was quoted as saying that Mr. Ford's apology to the Jews had done more than anything else to check bigotry in the U.S. and that it was the voluntary act of a great man in the greatest moment of his life.

Aaron Sapiro was a small, fiery man who had been born in poverty in San Francisco, was forced as a child to sell matches and newspapers on the streets, and was raised for six years in an orphan asylum. He matriculated at the University of Cincinnati, getting a bachelor's degree there in 1904 and a Master's the next year. He earned his law degree in 1911 at the University of California. He practiced in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, and Chicago.

In 1923 a national magazine ran an inspirational article about Mr. Sapiro that was titled "Nothing Could Keep This Boy Down." He was described as "a lawyer with more than half a million clients — composing about one-tenth of all the people in the United States who make their living from the land."

Mr. Sapiro later became active in a number of others business and industrial fields, including motion pictures, milk distribution, laundries, and taxicabs, says the New York Times. At one time his name was linked with that of Al Capone, the late Chicago gang leader. In 1934 he was acquitted in Chicago with sixteen others of trade racketeering. Later that

Heine And Herzl

BY DR. PAUL J. DIAMANT OF JERUSALEM

Heinrich Heine died a hundred years ago and his anniversary was duly observed all over the world. On this occasion the poet and his work were again scrutinized, explained, and critically examined from every point of view. It is true that Heine's attitude to Judaism and the Jewish people came up for discussion, some passages from his writings relating to the Jews were quoted but it appears that only a few writers made a serious attempt to define the role which he occupied in the cultural life of the Jewish people.

It must be admitted that Heine himself, owing to the inconsistencies and contradictions of his character and of his writings has made it difficult to clarify this issue. However, first of all let us state here what cannot be contested: He was the greatest poet of Jewish extraction between Yehudah Halevi and Chaim Nachman Bialik. Some scholars attempted to depict him as a Jewish patriot and national Jew. Let us examine whether this assertion is being borne out by the facts.

There are many passages in his books which may be adduced in support of this thesis but also arguments to the contrary can be found in his writings. He never occupied himself seriously and continuously with the Jewish question nor did he show a permanent interest in Jews and Judaism. He was only for a short time active in the Berlin Association for Jewish Culture and in 1825 the young man of 28 committed the folly of his baptism and he never formally revoked this step although he mocked at it during his whole life and undoubtedly regretted it frequently and sincerely.

However, these outward appearances are misleading. Heine never got rid of his Jewishness — or to put it in another way, he never severed his Jewish connections and affiliations and during his whole life he was grappling with Jewish problems. This fact entitles us to draw comparisons between him and Herzl and to point to similarities without concealing differences. Both of them belong to the leading figures of our cultural life: Heine the great Jewish poet and Herzl the greatest Jewish statesman within two thousand years.

Now the question poses itself whether there existed some affinity and relationship between them. Both hailed from the Jewish middle classes of Central Europe. Their ancestors lived in small towns — those of Heine in Bueckeburg in Western Germany; Herzl's at Semlin, on the frontier of Hungary and Serbia. Herzl, the writer, is a spiritual descendant of Heine and he was fully conscious of this kinship. When Herzl was to be appointed correspondent of his newspaper in Paris, he wrote to his parents, "also Heine was correspondent in Paris".

Theodor Herzl was much more than a disciple of the literary evolution initiated by Heine. He ushered in a revolutionary period that stretched from 1895 to at least 1948. We have already gained the necessary distance from this epoch to see clearly that this was not a time of evolutionary development but that a tremendous revolution was taking place within the Jewish people, comparable to that which we commemorate each year at Passover recalling how the slaves left Egypt in order to live as free men in their homeland.

Both men broke with the tradition of their forebears, who were industrious Jewish tradesmen, and ventured to make a living from their literary work. Both of them began in literature and entered politics. Herzl succeeded in finding the way to the Jewish people and to become its leader. Heine's political endeavour ended with a twofold failure: he influenced neither the Germans nor the Jews.

It may be said that in principle they held similar views with regard to State and constitution: neither was a republican; both of them appreciated the constitutional monarchy. Heine emphasised expressly that he was a monarchist and Herzl lived at a time when thrones had not yet begun to totter so that he could regard the existence of monarchies as a well-established fact. In this connection, however, it should be mentioned that once he also regarded the aristocratic republic — on the model of Venice — as quite a suitable form of constitution. Both Heine and Herzl were great friends of the people and welcomed the growth of the power steadily accruing to the masses of the population while they rejected violent revolutions.

Both men were well acquainted with the Jew-baiting in German-speaking countries but outspoken anti-Semitism on the part of Frenchmen surprised them very much. Heine experienced this disappointment when he was to witness the anti-Jewish movement that started in France in connection with the blood libel of Damascus and Herzl had observed French anti-Semitism in 1892, that is to say a considerable time before the show of the trial and conviction of Dreyfuss. Heine replied to the French anti-Semitism with a mockery reminiscent of Herzl; and Herzl, on the other hand, with an irony worthy of Heine. In 1892 he wrote: "The main objection to the Jews in France is that they hail from Frankfurt", but in 1895 there is left no trace of this ridicule and he wrote his "Judenstaat" in utmost seriousness and with sacred devotion.

The relations of both men to women should not be regarded as irrelevant and incidental. Both of them respected womanhood, both of them dearly loved their mothers and were strongly influenced by them. They were handsome men but did not take undue advantage of this accomplishment.

Some readers will be astonished to learn that in the families of both there were men, who yearning for Zion, sought and found a close connection with the country of their ancestors: the great uncle of Heine, Simon von Geldern and the great-uncle of Herzl, Samuel Bieliz. Simon von Geldern was a very interesting and versatile man, he was a fashionable gentleman of the 18th century and at the same time a pious pilgrim who ultimately went to Palestine to atone for his sins; he concluded his stormy life in Safed in 1788. Exactly one hundred years later in 1888, the brother of Herzl's grandmother from his father's side died in Jerusalem. Bieliz was less famous than the chevalier de Geldern but his personality was more balanced. Being associated with the precursors of political Zionism, Dr. Lurie and Rabbi Alkalay, he served as interpreter of various Austrian consulates in the Balkan countries and finally he moved to Jerusalem, where he passed away.

The fates of both Herzl and Heine were inseparably connected with the Jewish people; Heine's connection may be compared with a shattered torso whose remnants are still full of grandeur and beauty, while Herzl's work is like a magnificent and harmonious masterpiece. Chaim Nachman Bialik said that Heine was a Jew who expiated his sins by his sufferings and whose death made peace between himself and his God: Herzl's personality and work are for ever unchallenged and unequalled.

Canadian Jewish Congress Statement On Reaction Here To Vandalism

The following statement by Monroe Abbey, chairman of the national executive committee, of the Canadian Jewish Congress, was issued on behalf of the organization:

The Canadian Jewish Congress is heartened by the reaction of Canadians to the recent sporadic incidents of vandalism and desecration that have occurred in several centres across the country. Condemnation of these acts recently expressed by the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs and by other leaders and in newspaper editorials reflect the general revulsion of the Canadian people.

These incidents, while they may be inspired by the example of Neo-Nazism in Germany, appear for the most part to be the acts of the lunatic fringe, a form of imitative hooliganism, and should not be taken as the work of an organized anti-Semitic movement in Canada.

Unfortunately, the manifestations of anti-Semetism in Germany cannot be considered in the same light. It should be remembered that in the 1930's anti-Semitism and Nazism, hand in hand, marched the world to the brink of disaster. We believe Canadians have a right to expect drastic action by the Government of the Federal Republic of Germany to suppress the current spate of incidents and to root out ex-Nazis from positions of influence in government and education. Indeed, we are happy to see a determination of the Government of West Berlin and in Chancellor Adenauer himself to deal vigorously with these Nazi manifestations, and we are aware of a great body of German public opinion which rejects these acts as fully as do Canadians themselves.

These events underline the need for vigilance both abroad and in Canada and we are pleased that law enforcement agencies in many Canadian cities have indicated their recognition of this need and have taken action accordingly.

At the same time, these local incidents across Canada should not unduly disturb the Canadian Jewish community. On the other hand, the perpetrators have not yet been caught and some of them will doubtless try to gain more publicity by further incidents. We counsel vigorous efforts by all law enforcement agencies to apprehend those responsible and subject them to prosecution in the courts.

The use of the swastika by the persons responsible for these outrages will unite all Canadians through their common revulsion to a symbol that now stands for tyranny and inhumanity.

SAYS MOST BASIC, CRUCIAL PROBLEM

rance, 6.2 per cent of all executive employees are Jewish, but in home offices, only 3.6 per cent are Jewish," the report said. The report termed it significant that "even among the 3.6 per cent" two-thirds were "clustered in jobs as actuaries, doctors, lawyers, or accountants and hence could not be considered as administrative, front-office, or policy-making employees."

The branch offices of the insurance companies, the report noted, "were most apt to hire Jews where sales are to be made in cities with large Jewish populations." It added that five of the seven companies had home offices and sales branches in New York. "In the New York sales branches of these five companies 10 per cent of executive personnel are Jews; in the home offices, only 4.1 per cent," Judge Rose reported.

Arnold Forster, general counsel and civil rights director of the League, who supervised the survey, said it covered 6,066 executives earning more than $10,000 a year. He observed that the companies represented more than half of the industry's $10,500,000,000 sales in 1958.

Mr. Forster said that the companies studied "represented a cross-section in the sense that three were among the largest in the country, two were medium-sized and two were comparatively small, says the New York Times." The report, he said, was the first study on a national scale "to determine the extent to which Jews are employed on executive levels in the insurance industry." The survey was conducted by a team headed by Harold Braverman, director of the League's department on discrimination.

National Canadian Bank 85th Annual General Meeting

The 85th annual general meeting of the shareholders of National Canadian Bank was held at the head office of the bank, Place d'Armes, Montréal, on Tuesday, January 12, under the chairmanship of Charles St-Pierre. Ulric Roberge, vice-president and general manager, read the Board of Directors' report on the results of the past year's operations.

Profits, showing a gain of $488,875 amount to $5,492,709, a new high. After provision of $2,090,000 for taxes and of $776,995 for depreciation of bank premises, net profits total $2,625,714, an increase of 16.21% over the previous year. Following an issue of 300,000 shares, per share earnings on the average number of shares outstanding during the year were $3.02, against $3.24 in 1958.

Total deposits aggregate $696,942,053, a record figure.

Total assets are at an all-time high of $743,381,415. Cash assets increased during the year from $102,107,685 to $152, 861, 900 and are equal to 21.87% of liabilities to the public, against 14.84% a year ago. Quick assets are shown at $339,105,231, or 48.51% of same liabilities.

Current loans and discounts, having risen by $38,677,728 during the year, reached $368,240,729, a new peak. Mortgages under the National Housing Act amount to $24,337,632 as compared with $18,871,280 in 1958. The increase in credit requirements of customers compelled the bank to allocate to commercial loans a part of its investments the sum of which was reduced from $255,648,887 to $182,217,010.

The directors take pleasure in acknowledging the loyal cooperation of the staff who are the Bank's main asset and to whom great credit is due for their contribution to its progress. The members of the staff, conscious of their responsibilities to the Bank and to its clients alike, endeavoured to serve both in the performance of their duties with commendable willingness and diligence.

The president gave an outline of economic conditions and dwelt on Canada's foreign relations. He showed how the rapid evolution of the world economy affects our external trade. The condition of our international accounts, he said, which are showing an increased deficit, is bound sooner or later to create serious difficulties. Even if the inflow of foreign capital is sufficient to offset deficits, the fact remains that a country, no more than an individual, cannot live indefinitely by borrowing. If Canada is to remain master of its own destiny, its most important and most urgent objective should be to accelerate capital formation in order to increase Canadian investments in the development of the natural resources and of the industrial equipment of our country. This objective can only be attained through a methodical practice of economy in every domain.

The new year opens up encouraging prospects, but there will be serious problems, more particularly the re-establishment of international accounts on safer bases, the development of savings as a source of capital, and the stabilization of the dollar which is essential to the progress of export trade.

As the authorized capital of the bank is now fully subscribed, the meeting adopted a resolution to the effect that the authorized capital be increased from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000. The meeting passed another resolution with a view to increasing the number of directors of the bank from fourteen to sixteen.

The shareholders elected the Board of Directors as follows: Pierre Beauchemin, Wilbrod Bhérer, Q.C.; Hon. F. Philippe Brais, Q.C.; Aristide Cousineau, George A. Daly, Roger De Serres, Auguste Desilets, Q.C.; Hon. J. M. Dessureault, Geo. T. Donohue, Hon. Wilfrid Gagnon, A.-J. Major, Henri Ouimet, J.-Alexandre Prud'homme, Q.C.; Jean Raymond, Q.C.; Ulric Roberge, Charles St-Pierre. At a meeting of the board of directors immediately after the shareholders' meeting, Mr. St-Pierre was re-elected president and managing director of the bank; and Ulric Roberge and Hon. Wilfrid Gagnon were re-elected vice-presidents.

Instead of regarding epilepsy as a hopeless affliction it should be realized that with newly developed treatments, in some cases it is possible to control the seizures.

Thousands of Canadians live beside railroad tracks. Small children of these families may wander onto the tracks and be killed. A verandah with a strong gate or a large play pen, homemade if necessary, will help to keep toddlers from running into danger.

THE RESURRECTION OF ISRAEL

(3) Love of Your Arab Brethren: I love the Arabs just as much as I love the Jews and am just as sensitive to their sufferings. They are Semites, they are your blood brothers. You must help Israel to make super-abundant reparation for whatever harm they have suffered at her hands. This being accomplished I can envisage the new methods of agriculture, the techniques of reforestation, commercial know-how and fraternal encouragement proving in the end a tremendous boon for the Arabs both within and outside of Israel's borders.

(4) A Bulwark against Communism: As atheistic Communism is notorious for its ability to fish in troubled waters, and life for the new settlers in Israel was so rugged, to say the least, many felt the new state might fall a prey to Communism. Thanks to your help, Israel has fought off this terrible challenge. Only 2% of the population is red or pink and the party which once held three seats in Parliament now holds but one. In 1948 Israel's exports were valued at $37,000,000; in 1958 they had increased almost six-fold. As long as you help her, Israel will be one of the free world's bastions against the scourge of Communism.

(5) A Unique cultural center: Some speak as if Einstein was the only outstanding Jewish scholar. I shall not weary you by attempting to run the gamut but I must observe that Israel lies at the cross-roads of so many civilizations that it offers archaeological treasures beyond compare and should be one of the world's greatest centers of culture. The educational progress already accomplished is something every Jew can be proud of; but education and research is very costly so that Israel must for many years look to you for generous support.

(6) Help them to help themselves: You are not asked to subsidize laziness. Your investments have to date been spent with almost incredible good judgment, and the results have been little short of phenomenal. The reputation of world Jewry is certainly at stake. You cannot lift your heads unless you help Israel to help herself. What more can I say except: let me buy a Bond too!

The Resurrection Of Israel

Address to the annual Israel Bond dinner at London, Ontario

BY THE MOST REVEREND JOHN C. COBY, BISHOP OF LONDON, ONTARIO

I never lose sight of the fact that all Christians owe an endless debt of gratitude to the Jewish people for having kept alive for so many centuries the belief in the one true God; for having, as children of the covenant, given the world the divine charter of the ten commandments; for having written and preserved for us so much of the inspired Word of God in the Holy Scriptures; for having traced so well the roots of sacred liturgy, and for having provided us with so many heroic examples of virtue to guide us across the desert of life towards the promised land of heaven.

Sorrowfully it must be admitted that down through the ages, instead of welcoming occasions to pay our debt of gratitude, Christians have all too often heaped indignities and disabilities upon your people; but there is a notably different attitude today, thank God, when for instance we even have congregations of priests and sisters such as the Fathers and Sisters of Zion obligated by vow to spend their whole lives praying for the Jewish people! Perhaps they have had some humble share in the mysterious present-day resurrection of Israel!

I am pleased to be with you to emphasize deservedly this bicentenary of your arrival in Canada where, despite tremendous initial difficulties, you have contrived pro rata to your numbers to make a greater contribution to our national stature than any other ethnical group.

I am glad to offer you commendation for your generous share in sponsoring the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews and the institution of Brotherhood Week, so highly praised by successive Canadian Prime Ministers, whereby, without sacrifice of principle, we learn to live in a pluralistic society with genuine mutual esteem and co-operation. Finally, there are personal reasons which make this a particularly happy occasion for me. My father's name was David, so am I not of the House of David? A good mother taught me to salute the priest, but also the minister and the rabbi, for she insisted that every gentleman is worthy of respect and true charity cannot be a one-way street. God bless her and all you good ladies of the Hadassah!

Being Irish, how can I forget that when the Emerald Isle was striking for her freedom the famous Rabbi Stephen Wise, of New York, was foremost among those who championed her cause and helped to sell her republican bonds? Forgive me if I do not detail the countless favors I have received from loyal Jewish friends except to say that when my mother was dying it was a Jewish gentleman who contrived to get me to her bed-side before the angel of death called her away.

Now with great humility I must give you my impressions of Israel, fully cognizant of the dangers which beset anyone who in a short trip tries, even with the best of good will, to size up the mentality and condition of a whole country which he had never visited before. My impressions are spontaneous because I avoided making a guided tour, the better to form my own opinions. Father McCormick and I took a plane from Rome to Lebanon and motored from Beirut through Syria and Jordan to Jerusalem being accorded everywhere the greatest of courtesy. After visiting the Dead Sea, Jericho, Bethlehem, Gethsemane, Calvary, the Holy Sepulchre and other places of special interest, we went to the Moslem Temple and while standing beside the Wailing Wall offered a fervent prayer for all the Jews of the World.

We crossed from Jordan into Israel without the slightest difficulty. When it was found that a Catholic Bishop had crossed over, a government official was soon at hand to show us some of the chief places of interest. Passing the Valley of Gehennah, we proceeded to ascend Mount Zion, wearing the little skull caps and the Jewish pilgrim's button in memory of the millions of Jews slaughtered by the Nazis in World War II. After visiting the Tomb of David, we saw the Christian site of the Cenacle, and also the beautiful Church of the Dormition, pock-marked with shell fire but fortunately not seriously damaged.

Our next stop was the magnificent Hebrew University, opened in 1926, and having now an enrolment of 4,000 students including some Catholic priests and sisters. On the Jordan side we had seen from a distance the caves of the Essenes but here at the University we were permitted to view some of the famous Qumran documents which among other things may throw much interesting new light upon the events of Christian Holy Week. During the tasteful dinner presented to us at a large new modern hotel, the government official was amazingly frank in pointing out some of Israel's laws, such as those pertaining to marriage between a Jew and a Christian, which would need to be amended in order to do full justice to all concerned; but he assured us that Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion was determined, once he had a sufficient majority in the Knesseth (Parliament), to remove defects caused by various extremists.

Ben-Gurion also hoped to institute a type of representation similar to our Canadian constituency where each member represents not just a party but a given territory. Though thoroughly democratic, Israel suffers somewhat from parliamentary fragmentation. When one considers the desperate initial difficulties which Israel had to face, the fact that most of her citizens were penniless refugees from 70 different language-groups, taking up residence in a country surrounded by powerful enemies, and whose economy was in a run-down condition, one is bound to exclaim: "digitus Dei est hic", that is, "the finger of God is here", as he views the Israel of today.

There is no room for idlers or slackers. Everyone must take his responsibilities seriously. Some who bounced in with joy, bounced out again at the first opportunity, unable or unwilling to stand the general arduous pace. Military service for both men and women has been ably capitalized upon to improve the nation's physical resources and to make Israel for its size the toughest and best-disciplined power in the Middle East. Young ladies wishing to get married are exempt from military service. There is no sign of artificial birth control in Israel: what Onan did is still rightly considered a detestable thing (Genesis, XXXVIII: 9, 10).

Aided by about 100,000 immigrants per annum, Israel's population since 1948 has all but tripled, being now 1,800,000 Jews; 160,000 Moslems; 20,000 Druzes; and 40,000 Christians. Life expectancy is about the same as in the United States or Canada, while infant mortality has fallen from 52 per thousand in 1948 to 3 per thousand today.

As we left Jerusalem by car, we noted the road strewn with old, abandoned guns, mute evidence of the fierce struggle which led up to the present modus vivendi between the Jews and the Arabs. What impressed us most, however, were the Herculean efforts to bring the country-side back into productivity. When I was approaching Jerusalem from the Jordan side, I recalled the seemingly endless miles of wasteland and asked my Arab-Christian guide: "How could the Bible ever have called this country a land flowing with milk and honey?" To which he replied firstly that, compared with the utter desolation of the Arabian desert, it was comparatively a paradise; and secondly that Palestine was then in immeasurably better condition than when later endless wars had ruined the vine-yards and gardens of the industrious country folk.

Israel has eagerly taken up the challenge to make even the deserts bloom again and, with the aid of its children of the Diaspora Dispersion, and using the scientific discoveries of this wonder age, will assuredly win the battle of restoration and conceivably bring the country to a higher level than ever before. Within the past ten years, for instance, more than eleven million trees have been planted which in due course will have a tremendous effect on the climate of the area. Outsiders laughed at the Jewish hopes of making the Negev desert produce but over one-third has already been reclaimed successfully. Laughter has given way to amazement.

In 1948 there were 290 agricultural settlements; today there are more than 760. In 1948 there were 412,500 acres under cultivation; today there are more than 1,000,000. In 1948 there were 72,500 acres under irrigation; today the figure has quadrupled to more than 275,000 acres. Who says the Jewish people cannot be successful farmers! The Jewish people can lead in any line of endeavour to which they care to devote their exceptional talents and determination.

After visiting Ein Kerem, birthplace of St. John the Baptist, we motored to Tel Aviv, not a beautiful but a bustling metropolis surrounded by immense new housing projects. Our hotel on the outskirts was well-equipped and about the last word in courteous, efficient service. I remember making mental note of the wonderful towels, the best I have ever come across anywhere. About two years ago Helena Rubinstein opened an up-to-date Art Gallery in Tel Aviv. With an amiable chauffeur who asked as many questions as we did, we visited among other places Caesarea, Nazareth, Cana, the Horns of Hattin where Saladin in 1187 broke the power of the crusaders, the Sea of Galilee on the shores of which we ate some of the descendants of the fish the apostles used to net; Magdala which gave its name to Mary Magdalene, and at the end of the lake the ruins of the ancient Synagogue of Capharnaum; the Mount of the Beatitudes.

It was on this journey that we made contact with some of the settlements of Arabs in Israel and noted with satisfaction that they gave every evidence of being well treated. The number of Jewish children receiving elementary education in Israel has risen from 98,000 in 1948 to nearly 400,000 in 1958. In the same period, Arab children attending school increased: the boys from 65% to 90%, and the girls from 15% to 50%. Nevertheless, the greatest single problem of Israel is still how to make adequate compensation to the Arab families who were dispossessed of their homes during the war. As far as the Holy Places are concerned, with the lessening of tensions I do not despair of both Jordan and Israel finding a way to guarantee permanently full liberty of access for pilgrims of all persuasions perhaps through the good offices of the United Nations. The custody of Christian Holy Places is usually in charge of the Franciscans who for centuries have performed this task, losing some 70 of their number by violent death.

Let me now rapidly sum up the reasons why you should generously provide the material means for the peaceful progress of Israel:

(1) Love of your religious traditions and ours: Every nation has a providential vocation but none stands out so clearly and with such vital importance as yours. God Himself has made you a unique people and whether you be Orthodox, Reform or Conservative Jews, or even one of the many unchurched, it should be a labor of love, without detriment to God's children of other persuasions, to play your part in maintaining the spiritual foundations without which the human race cannot endure.

(2) Love of your homeland: Originally it was assigned to you by God Himself and wherever you were scattered your hearts seemed always to return there, as the Royal Psalmist records how certain exiles were so sad they could not be coaxed to play their harps but hung them on the willow trees. Down through the ages you had much to suffer and much to repent of on Yom Kippur, but your sufferings seemed to reach a climax in World War II when so many millions of innocent people were insulted, robbed, tortured, and put to death: 4,000,000 in Poland alone. You were convinced and it would not be easy to prove you wrong, that you were entitled to one spot on earth where you could live your life in dignity and freedom wearing no cruel badge of dishonor. Perhaps the beloved homeland does not need your presence but it does need your help for without it brave little Israel would soon become yet another ghetto for your kith and kin, perhaps to saddest one of all.

Canadian Jewish Congress Statement On Anti-Semitism In Germany

The recent outbreaks of anti-Semitism and Neo-Nazism in Germany which are causing grave concern to the Jewish community in Canada, were the topic of an emergency meeting of the Canadian Jewish Congress. The following statement was issued by Monroe Abbey, of Montreal, chairman of the national executive, on behalf of the organization:

"It was with a deep sense of shock and revulsion that we learned of the recently perpetrated outrageous incidents of anti-Semitism and revived Nazi demonstrations in Germany. It would appear that the lessons of the past are quickly forgotten. Anti-Semitism is bad for what it is, but it is worse for what it reflects, a mental decay and degeneration. The present government of West Germany has a good record in its attempts to erase some of the acts of the former nefarious regime, and will undoubtedly do all in its power to prevent further occurrences.

As it progresses, anti-Semitism usually transforms itself from something endemic to something epidemic. The civilized world would do well to pause and reflect that these matters are not solely within the sovereignty of a state where incidents occur. If the years 1933 to the outbreak of the war proved anything they surely proved that such matters spill over artificial borders and create world problems, not only leading to genocide but to wars. All governments should forget the niceties of the rules of diplomacy and abide by rules of international justice to exert every effort to assist in the extirpation of this crime against humanity."
